I. 次の英文を読んで、それに続く設問に答えなさい。

There are many popular pets around the world. Cats are (1) independent and playful, while dogs are loyal and friendly. Fish are easy to keep and soothing to watch. Birds can be talkative and colorful companions. Hamsters and rabbits are small and easy to care for. Each pet brings joy to its owners' lives.

Owning pets can bring both advantages and disadvantages. One advantage is companionship. Pets can be great friends and offer comfort, especially for people living alone. They can also help people feel less lonely. Another benefit is the joy and happiness they bring. Pets often entertain us with their playful behavior, making us laugh and improving our mood. Moreover, owning a pet can (2) encourage physical activity. Walking a dog, for example, provides exercise for both the owner and the pet, promoting a healthier lifestyle.

However, owning pets also comes with its challenges. One disadvantage is the cost associated with their care. Pets need food, toys, and other supplies, which can be expensive. Additionally, owning a pet means taking on (3) responsibility. This includes providing proper food, regular exercise, and healthcare. Some people may find this commitment difficult, especially if they have a busy lifestyle or limited resources.

Another problem with owning pets is the potential for allergies. Some people are allergic to pet hair, which can cause breathing problems. Moreover, pets can sometimes cause damage to (4) property. Dogs may chew furniture or scratch floors, while cats may claw at curtains or furniture covers. Cleaning up after pets can also be time-consuming and require extra effort.

In conclusion, while owning pets can offer friendship, joy, and health benefits, it also brings obligations and difficulties. Future pet owners should carefully (5) consider these factors before bringing a pet into their home. Despite the challenges, many people find the rewards of pet ownership to be well worth the effort.
